

Diefenbaker Against Sin!

Education Is Labour Plank

Educational reform will be the major item in the programme of the labour movement in Canada announced Claude Jodoin, president of the Canadian Congress of Labour.

Speaking at the closing banquet of the two-day convention of the Quebec Labour Federation, Mr. Jodoin said he felt the time was ripe to study the present backward educational system in Canada and to adopt a more comprehensive system.

He stressed particularly the need for co-ordination in the primary and high schools and the various universities, and new institutions to accommodate the 63 per cent increase in enrollment expected within the next twenty years.

"Let us do it before our children look at us in the years to come and ask us why was it that they were not educated like children in other countries," said Mr. Jodoin.

Tripping the Light Fantastic

MICHAEL AND HELEN CONTE, who demonstrated some fine dancing at Activities, are featuring as two of the dance instructors at the McGill Union's Dance Course. Mike Conte is planning to teach some of the latest steps in Cha-Cha. The classes are due to start on October 29.

PC Spokesman Views Foreign Situation

"I've seen a number of great things done in Parliament — but never on purpose." — J. Brighton, British M. P.

This remark, was quoted by John Diefenbaker, candidate for the leadership of the Progressive Conservative Party leadership and P. C. expert on foreign affairs, in an address on international affairs before the Canadian Club of Montreal yesterday.

Mr. Diefenbaker gave his views on Russian foreign policy and other world situations pertinent to Canada.

KHRUSCHEV

Referring to the Russian veto in the United Nations last Saturday, Mr. Diefenbaker said that this revealed the true face behind Khrushchev's smile. There has been no essential change in Soviet policy since Stalin's demise and the debunking of the "cult of personality", he added. Russia is still trying to destroy NATO, it was pointed out, and is gaining ground as evidenced by the fact that the position of both Iceland and Greece in NATO has been weakened. On the economic front the buying of surpluses above world prices by the Soviets has weakened the international economic situation. These, Mr. Diefenbaker pointed out, were only a few examples of Russia's playing behind the scenes.

INTERMEDIATE ROLE

Turning to Canada Mr. Diefenbaker stated that Canada enjoys great international status. To maintain such a status our defences and economic position must be kept up. On the international scene, the Progressive Conservative spokesman said that Canada can play a role between Britain, France, and the United States. He also emphasized that international affairs must be independent of election campaigns, permitting flexibility in policy. This was an indirect inference to American policy on Suez in the light of the election year.

On the economic front Mr. Diefenbaker said that world trade should be based on the policy of "competition yes, giveaway no." The world economic position must not be based on any false systems. Wheat giveaways such as those to India and Brazil are dangerous to Canada economically, he added. It was "from differences such as this" that the "wider differences which we do not want to anticipate" are born, Mr. Diefenbaker also stated.

DEW LINE

Dew Line policy should be cleared in Ottawa, not Washington, was the view of the would-be P. C. leader.

Switching to international events once more, Mr. Diefenbaker stated that we must win World War III by preventing it. To do so spiritual hope and aspiration should be raised and kept up where existing among the people of the Communist satellites and in Russia herself.

$6 MILLIONS FUND—ALMOST HALFWAY

After week-end soliciting of gifts and pledges that brought The McGill Fund — 1956 to a progress total of $2,859,360, canvassers are striving to exceed the half-way mark this week in response to general chairman R.E. Powell's call for over-subscription of the original goal of $6,000,000, set nearly a year ago.

Revised estimates of costs of the fund projects show the adverse affects of the steel workers' strike last summer, Mr. Powell told the canvassing committees. "This campaign must produce more money," he declared.

University officials said yesterday that the expansion projects in the McGill Fund have become more urgent than they were a few weeks ago.

ENROLLMENT PROBLEMS

For example, McGill's enrollment problems in engineering have reached a critical stage. In first year engineering, 368 students are now enrolled for classes that had 285 students a year ago.

"Every square inch into which we can crowd these people has been taken up," officials said.

Through the fund, McGill seeks to provide new engineering facilities that will enable last year's enrollment to be doubled.

National Health Plan Discussed

Sir Hugh Linstead, Secretary of the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain, voiced the opinion that Canada would eventually put a national health plan into effect. Sir Hugh is in Canada "to meet groups of the Canadian Pharmaceutical Association and talk about a national health plan."

He stated that the health plan now in effect in Great Britain seems to work well. The public seems satisfied, although doctors are against the plan.

He warned of the dangers in putting a health plan into effect. The professional men involved

Reds Revise University Degrees

The Soviet Government has adopted a new decree concerning advanced scientific training in the Soviet Union. Their apparent aim is to improve the training of people receiving the Soviet degrees of Candidate and Doctor of Science, equivalent to the Canadian Master of Arts or Science or Doctor of Philosophy Degree. Complaints in the Soviet press suggest that many holders of degrees have insufficient training.

Concerning the degree of Doctor of Science, the customary two-year period of study and research has been replaced by a system whereby candidates write their theses while working in teaching or research posts. Only those who make a significant contribution to knowledge will be granted the degree.

GRADUATE STUDY

With respect to the Candidate of Science degree, two changes have been made. With few exceptions such as in the fields of mathematics or physics, no one will be admitted to graduate study without at least two years of practical experience. A thesis is no longer required for a degree; candidates instead must write an examination. Theses will, however, be an advantage to those seeking teaching and research positions. Government grants have been increased to attract those already in scientific posts to graduate study.

The number of universities able to grant Doctors' or Candidates' degrees has been sharply decreased.

Editorial

Too Extreme?

It may seem strange for the Editorial Column of the Daily to spring to the defence of the Montreal motorist, but we have received a rather remarkable document that seems to go a little too far in its attempts to make the drivers of this city show at least a modicum of regard for life and limb.

The document is a petition calling for "the maximum penalty applicable by law" to be applied to motorists who are involved in traffic accidents. We sympathise strongly with the general idea of the petition, but the maximum penalty seems to be a little too harsh for even some of the drivers we run across (and vice versa) in an average, traffic dodging day. The maximum penalty applicable by law is death, and a petition of this sort, if taken literally, could result in social chaos. Presumably a time would come when with the prisons full, and the hangman was fully occupied, some stop gap system would have to be devised. This could take the form of a curb-side kangaroo court of twelve pedestrians who would, under proper legal direction from a policeman or passing lawyer, listen to the motorists case, and apportion blame. Then a quick hanging from the nearest lamp-post could be carried out, or the sentence could be commuted to life imprisonment if only bumper banging was involved. No doubt something has to be done to curb the worst excesses of the Montreal motorists. The spirit of the petition is admirable; the wording could be a little more careful.

Letters

Undemocratic

Dear Sir:

In Friday's Daily Mr. Khan discussed the democracy in the Middle East. Unfortunately, I find that Mr. Khan has 'overlooked' several points that affect the present situation in the Middle East.

Mr. Khan states that "Parliaments and constitutions are all collapsing and most countries are on the point of formally abandoning democracy." This statement is misleading, since no Middle Eastern country (excluding Turkey, Israel and Pakistan) has ever had any form of actual democratic government. The Arab states never did try a democratic system. Even today, the elections carried on in Egypt, Lebanon, Jordan and Syria are nothing but an ironic show.

They only illustrate the political corruption of these countries.

Furthermore, Mr. Khan did not mention the real reason for the failure of the democratic system.

Mr. Khan fails to notice that what hampered democracy in the Middle East was not the people, who never had the chance to taste it, but the leaders and politicians, who prefer to continue under the present feudal regime for the benefit of their self-seeking purposes.

These leaders not only fight any sign of democracy, but they go further and isolate their people from any foreign element that might introduce it to these people.

Only when this corrupt feudal regime will end, the peoples of the Middle East will be able to develop their countries and raise their standard of living.

Letters To The Editor

Small Mercies

Dear Sir:

May I take violent exception to the comments printed in your esteemed newspaper about the McGill Chamber Music Society Concert. Now I have no doubt whatever that G.H. is being perfectly honest in what he has to say about the event, but I wonder if honesty is the only pre-requisite for even a McGill Daily reviewer. Surely some knowledge is also required.

I did not attend the concert in

McGill A Leader

Thank you, Miss Roskies, for bringing attention to McGill's education problem.

May I propose a constructive scheme which would make McGill leader in a new era of college education. My suggestion is that, — considering that personal contacts between teachers and students in classes of 50 and over are nil, that many professors would like to devote more of their time to research, reading, etc., and that students prefer hearing lectures of high caliber given by those who are eminent in their respective fields, McGill should install a library of recorded lectures.

In classes, these lectures would be played to the students while senior students — acting as demonstrators — could project slides, graphs, and illustrations. Such lectures would be supplemented with tutorials and labs — where required. Copies of recorded lectures could be made available to the students via the library service.

This system, if adopted, would 1 — raise the quality of lectures, 2 — provide professors with more time for research, reading, attending conferences, etc., 3 — enable bursaries to pay student demonstrators, 4 — save money (in the long run) and conserve time (skipped lectures), 5 — give the students the satisfaction of getting their money's worth.

How about it, Board of Governors?

Yours truly,
i.s.k. '66

RED REVISE...

A Central Certification Commission 17 members has been set up to carry out these new regulations. All theses must pass this board. Two new policies give the Commission its power.

Persons receiving higher degrees on the basis of a thesis will no longer receive an automatic pay increase, but must wait until the thesis has been accepted.

question so I shall not take exception to the "facts" listed in the report, but I think that no matter G.H.'s opinion of Mr. Brott's capacities as a conductor, he should at least admit that probably Brott has also looked at the score of the last movement of the 4th Brandenburg concerto. It is also fair to assume that Brott has also read the composer's markings and that if he has chosen to alter them it was for what he probably felt was a valid reason. The success or failure of his choice is of course a matter of opinion, but this opinion should be based on at least as much reflection as Brott gave to his original decision.

Complaints about the sale of seats for concerts of this type should, Mr. Editor, be expressed in your esteemed editorial column. If the situation is as bad as G.H. makes it out to be than there is no excuse for your having ignored it. If on the other hand G.H.'s vanity was as much injured as the base of his spine, a report of the concert was no place to be salving his bruises. In fact if the concert was all as bad as he makes it out to be, he should be thankful that he at least had the "Gothic style ceiling of the hall" to occupy his aesthetic sensibilities. One should be thankful for small mercies.

Sincerely,
Angered

Track and Field

McGillians Host To Intercollegiate Meet Tomorrow

The fine weather that has been keeping most McGillians out on the campus these last few days is hoped to continue when McGill plays host to the Intercollegiate Track and Field Meet on Wednesday.

This year only McGill and Toronto will field complete teams. Western and MacMaster will make partial entries while Queen's has not entered this year.

Reid, Boldon, and Maule will be running in the relay, while the fourth slot will be filled either Spencer or Lynch. Due to the fact that Maule is just recovering from an attack of the flu and that he pulled a leg muscle during the summer he will be participating only in the relay. Therefore McGill might not fare so well in an event which she won hands down last season.

It is interesting to note that McGill and Toronto are the only entrants in both the broad and high jump, and therefore points must be won by both teams.

Back again for Toronto after a one year absence is Williams who won the hurdles and broad jump two years ago.

J. Maule of MacMaster will be competing against McGill's Wallingford in the 440 and 880 yard runs as well as the mile. The experts predict that he will prove to be a match for Wallingford. Last years winner of the pole vault MacKenzie of MacMaster will be out again this year.

Coach Anderson of McGill has issued the following lineups:

Discus Southerland, Loues; Shot Putt-Southerland, Kalnins; Javelin-Moser, Kalnins; Pole Vault-Land, Anderson; High Jump-Briere Land; Broad Jump-Parsons, MacKintosh; 100 yard-Lynch, MacKintosh; 220 yard-Lynch, Boldon; 440 yard-Reid, Boldon; 880 yard-Wallingford, Reid; One mile-Wallingford, Roy; Three mile-Wallingford, Mersereau; Low Hurdles-Roland, Wright; High Hurdles-Roland, MacKenney.

Toronto has come away from the meet with all the honours in previous years, but this year McGill is in a position to take away their crown, McGill came third in 1954 year. Therefore it only follows that the glory will be McGill's this year.
